He has determined to make the Bennett as good as the best and better than any public house in Salem. He will soon complete some important improvements which will add greatly to its appearance and comfort, and intends to merit and hopes to receive his share of patronage.

He has secured the services of Charley (known to be the best cook in Salem and one of the best in the whole country) and other competent persons to manage the culinary department, and is resolved to set as good a table as can be found anywhere—not in clap trap, pomp and show, flummery and fine furniture, but in an abundant supply of the very best the market affords.

His Bar room will be kept warmed and lighted, and well supplied with newspapers, periodicals and other suitable reading matter, and kept in a manner which will make it an agreeable resort.

In short, he intends making an effort to please all who stop at the BENNETT HOUSE. And he most respectfully requests his friends everywhere to give the old and well known stand at least one more trial before concluding they can do as well elsewhere, and promises if they are not well treated and properly cared for and at reasonable figures it will not be the fault of the public's most obedient and most humble servant,

A Reminiscence of '49.

The following unvarnished and truthful statement, says the Owyhee Avalanche, is of a character of a thousand adventures in the history of gold hunting on the Pacific Coast, and but few of which will ever find a pen to place them on record. This experience is written for a California journal, but we have been permitted to publish it first, believing we could obtain nothing that would be of more interest.

Having often been requested to give a written account of an adventure to which I was a party in the early days of California, I with some diffidence comply, believing that there are those whose interest in myself and in the history of the times of which I write is sufficient to induce them to receive the narrative of a single instance of the privations to which I, in common with thousands, were subject before the days of railroads, steamboats or even stage coaches in the Valley of the Sacramento or its waters—if not with pleasurable interest, at least without positive repugnance.

On the 10th day of November, 1849, L. G. Fell, H. I. Simpson and myself having completed a canoe dug from a species of timber known as Digger Pine, set sail from the mouth of Middle Creek, in Shasta county, intending to navigate the Sacramento river to its mouth, or until we should find employment by which to gain a livelihood, which we erroneously concluded could not be procured in "Redding's Diggings," in consequence of the water in the gulches, which had driven us out of our claim, where we had hitherto found lucrative employment in picking gold out of the dry dirt with our butcher knives. Fell sat in the bow, Simpson amidships and I in the stern, each with a paddle with which to propel our craft and guide her in her course down the unknown stream. Having been a flat boatman of some experience on the Mississippi, the post of steersman or captain was assigned me by common consent, and out of respect to an old "broad horn" pilot whom we had all known on those waters, my comrades bestowed upon me the sobriquet by which he was known from the Upper Wabash to the Balize, viz, "Old Safety," a name which he had acquired by the peculiar manner in which he pronounced the word safety when dilating upon his success as a steersman in never having lost a boat, etc.

"Lay her straight, Safety," was the word as we glided out into the stream, now swollen to a flood by the early rains of that remarkably wet season, and sped swiftly down the broad reach that opened out before us. Everything went lovely for about an hour and a half, and we had already begun to anticipate our arrival at Sacramento City and to form plans of operation after the event. Those little speculations, however, were brought to a speedy termination on arriving at what we have since known as the Clear Creek Rapids, which, notwithstanding the swollen state of the stream, still revealed themselves in the shape of billowy swells that dashed the water into our boat, nearly filling her and saturating both ourselves and baggage as if we had all been immersed in the river. This trouble over, we all set to work with might and main to bale her out, but while thus engaged, a new terror presented itself in the distance. An island suddenly hove in sight, on either side of which the waves were dashing to the height of several feet and threatening utter destruction whether we went to the right or to the left. On nearing the island, however, we concluded that by keeping near its left hand shore, where the water appeared smoother than elsewhere, we might make the trip in safety, and to this purpose bent all our energies, hugging the island bank as closely as possible. About midway of its length we discovered, when too late to avoid it, to our great consternation, a channel cutting it in two. Into this rushing, turbulent torrent drift logs and other floating debris were being drawn and whirled about like straws in a whirlwind. We at once saw that in avoiding Scylla we were about to flounder on Charybdis. Here began earnest work, every man paddling for dear life to avoid the Maelstrom into which we were rushing to destruction. We made every possible effort to escape, but to no purpose. We were drawn into the mouth of the chute, but had given such an impetus to our canoe that she ran across and struck a willow on the point of the second land and sunk almost in the twinkling of an eye, leaving us all sprawling in the water. Fortunately the willows stood so close together that we were enabled to reach from one to the other until we dragged ourselves in this way to near the center of the island, where the water was only about waist deep. Here we held a consultation. A mighty river rolled between us and the land on either side, and to attempt to swim it either way was to expose ourselves to perils in which life could have but small advantage over death, for each doubted his ability to reach the shore. To remain where we were was sure death, as already our limbs were becoming stiff in the ice cold water, only a few hours from Shasta Butte. We had to choose, and that quickly, between certain death on the island and a precarious attempt to reach the shore by swimming. Just then some Indians appeared upon the eastern shore and gazed at us as if they had never seen a white man before, as some of them probably never had. We made every sign of which we were masters to induce them to come to our rescue. We pulled off our coats, shirts, hats and boots and held them up as an inducement, but they refused the tempting offer, and we, in the last agonies of despair, threw away on the water all our clothing except pantaloons and struck out for the western bank. Fell, being more expert in the water than Simpson and myself, reached the land with comparative ease before he had passed the foot of the island, while we buffeted the current as manfully as we could, keeping close together, until we had drifted down over a half a mile and were nearing the shore, when Simpson cramped and told me he could hold out no longer and must sink unless I could help him. I knew that to be a hopeless case unless I could reach bottom, for my strength was exhausted too much to be of the least use stance in swimming water. I accordingly cautiously lowered myself down and to my infinite delight touched the bottom, and reaching out my hand took hold of him, dragged him ashore and up the bank out of the water. Here we lay for a moment to rest, and on attempting to rise found that neither of us had any use of his limbs, which had become so benumbed by the cold water as to be useless as a means of locomotion. After rubbing ourselves we managed to hobble up the bank and met Fell, who had despaired of ever seeing us again and was searching along the bank for our bodies. Here we were in a wild Indian country, no shoes, coats or hats, no human habitation in many miles, night coming on and the weather stormy. We were almost frantic with alarm, and only the sheer necessity of the situation could keep up courage sufficient to enable us to move at all. We started back up the river in hope of finding a trading post at the mouth of Clear Creek, but were disappointed, everything having been removed to Shasta. We met a man, however, by the name of Maffat, who gave us a pair of blankets. With these we started for Reading's Ranch, at the mouth of Cottonwood. Our feet were already sore, although we had only walked three or four miles. We trudged along the best we could until nearly dark, when, as good luck would have it, we came to a herder's camp and stopped for the night. Mr. R. Baskett, now County Clerk of Umatilla County, Oregon, was, I believe, keeping stock there for Capt. Ben Hudspeth. We happened to arrive when they were entirely out of provisions, but one man was out hunting, and they hoped to have meat when he returned. We spread our blanket down before the fire and all three crowded ourselves on it, drawing the other over us, and went to sleep. About three o'clock the hunter returned with a deer before him on his horse, which was a signal for all hands to come to supper. The deer was soon dressed and each man held a piece on a stick and roasting it at the fire. The ceremony was repeated again and again until nearly daylight, when it was discovered that six men had nearly devoured all that was eatable of venison. In the morning, footsore and weary, but much refreshed, we started on our painful journey, walking that day only about ten miles, when we came upon one Quire Wheeler, afterwards of Sam Neal's Ranch, with whom we remained over night on Cottonwood. Next day we went about twenty miles and encamped near where the town of Red Bluff now stands, building two large fires some distance apart and making our beds between them, one remaining on watch to keep the fires burning while the other two slept. A plentiful crop of acorns furnished us with supper and breakfast. Here we learned the art of roasting acorns as a means of rendering them palatable. Next day we reached Moon's Ranch, having passed that of R. H. Thome's during the day, and enjoyed his hospitality in the way of a goodly mess of beef, which they were jerking, as is the practice with old Californians, this way of preparing beef to keep.

At these ranches we had confidently expected to obtain shoes, but found that the Indians had used up every vestige of garment that could be found, including shoes, which would have been useless to us in our crippled condition had we got them, our feet being too sore to wear them. Leaving Moon's, in the morning we obtained a handkerchief full of crackers and a bottle of molasses with which to pursue our journey. Arriving at Stony Creek, and finding it deep, we halted on the shore before starting in to wade it, and while there drank up the molasses and threw the bottle into the creek.

The rains had ceased, the weather cold and frosty, the water terribly cold, and our feet sore and festering, all conspiring to render us as uncomfortable as possible, as it now appears in the retrospect. Nevertheless, as I remember our jokes and the avidity with which we ascended the grape laden sycamores of the bottoms and the gusto with which we devoured the luscious fruit that hung in such lavish profusion from the wild vines among the boughs, I sometimes contemplate the journey with emotions akin to pleasure. Crossing Stony Creek, which was up to our armpits, we came out in rather a demoralized condition, so much so indeed that we soon halted to dry ourselves and rest for the night in the first bend of the river below what was afterwards known as Munroeville. We had seen no white man this day, and only a few Indians, who were encamped near our fire. We went to their rancherie and demanded food, which they were ready enough to furnish in the shape of dried salmon, which upon trial our stomachs rejected in consequence of the fetid odor and taste of which it was possessed. Falling back upon acorns by way of bread and grapes to serve as meat and drink, we fared sumptuously night and morning, having passed the night between two log heaps as before described, and started out bright and early towards the settlements. We found our progress growing slower day by day in consequence of the sore and swollen condition of our bare feet, which had now assumed proportions nearly twice their ordinary size. At noon we stopped, built a fire, roasted about a peck of acorns and made a cup of tea in an oyster can, the ingredients being water and sycamore twigs. We have never made any sycamore tea since and probably never shall. This night we reached an abandoned ranch formerly known as Williams, but now the property of John Boggs. We had decided to open the adobe house and pass the night within its dilapidated walls, but looking down the river saw a smoke at no great distance and went to see who had caused it. Here we found a brother of Governor Matthews of Mississippi, who in descending the river in company with General Wilson and family from Lassen's ranch had gone ashore in quest of game and was lost, the boat having gone on without him. In him we found a jovial and genial companion. We remained with him over night, roasted acorns at his fire, and in the morning we all breakfasted in the same grape tree, remaining two or three hours in the branches before becoming satisfied. This day we traveled together until noon, when we came to a fork in the road, some time after passing the present site of Colusa. The right hand led via Lone Tree to Cochrane's ranch on Cache creek, and the left had recently been made by Governor Shannon, formerly of Ohio, who with his party had been wrecked in what is known as the Iron Canyon, and were also making their way to Sacramento City. We preferred to keep the old road to avoid the sloughs, while our new found friend determined to keep near the river in hopes to overtake his boat and party. That night we encamped at the Lone Tree, which was an oak heavily laden with our staff of life, and of which we made good use.

At sunrise the next morning, I arose and walked to a little eminence overlooking the valley which we had temporarily left for the foot hills or "red lands," and there beheld a sight the like of which I never expect to look upon again. In a beautiful valley containing several hundred acres, covered with a luxuriant growth of wild oats, clover and other grasses, were a countless herd of antelope, deer, and an occasional elk, filling the valley almost entirely, some lying down, some grazing and some skipping about like kittens at play. How we felt the want of those rifles, rifles and pistols now lying in soak at the bottom of the Sacramento, more than a hundred miles away. But it was useless to cry for spilt milk, so we marched at a slow pace until nearly night, when we met a man on horseback who informed us that twelve miles further only lay between us and Cochrane's, where we could procure a square meal, sound sleep, etc., and handing us a bottle of brandy from his saddle-bags, galloped off and left us. If we had any intention of camping that night, a few consultations with the bottle determined us to push on, and we did. Coming to a deep but narrow stream, one of the party who carried the bottle found himself unable to leap it and retain a perpendicular position. He accordingly cleared the water, but fell back headforemost into the stream and was dragged up the bank by the heels in a strangled and damaged condition. After drinking to his miraculous escape we moved on and reached Cochrane's about ten o'clock at night, having smelt the fragrance of frying beef and venison steak at least two miles before we reached the place. To say that grub of all kinds disappeared at a marvellous rate would be a feeble description of the scene at the table. Suffice it to say that in the morning we were refreshed but not hungry—a cup of coffee and a hot biscuit and gravy being quite sufficient for our appetites. Here we were offered shoes but were unable to wear them, and we walked on to Fremont, at the mouth of Feather river, next day, where we remained until February, having in the meantime thoroughly recovered from the hardships of the trip.

Having now brought our narrative and selves into a land of plenty, it would seem superfluous to add anything further, though I may as well remark that our advent into Fremont created quite a sensation among the curious, who flocked around to get a look at our half naked forms, and to avoid which we concealed ourselves in the store of Crow & Wambo and at once began to select clothing in which to make a more decent appearance. Those selected by myself were of a style in vogue about the time Brother Jonathan's likeness was taken. The fabric of the pants was cotton, with white, yellow and blue stripes. They came down to within four or five inches of a huge pair of shoes that looked as if they were made of cast iron. The coat was of blue cloth, with large quilted collar, cut in sharp notches, the skirts gracefully crossing each other like a pair scissors. In 1849, a majority of the clothing sent to the Pacific coast consisted of old remnants of old stocks long gone out of fashion in the East. This is the garb in which next morning I appeared before Judge Hester and family, now of Santa Clara county, and applied for a clerkship in his store.

Greeley's New Platform.

The Utica Morning Herald says:

It was on the platform of the constitutional amendment that the contest was fought and overwhelming victories obtained in every loyal State. By every Union State Convention and down into the county and district gatherings resolutions were adopted approving the amendment as the basis of restoration. Not a few of the outspoken Unionists pronounced further guarantees essential, but up to this point the loyal sentiment was clear and unequivocal. The victory won on this platform gives the Union party the control of the Government. Provided the rebellious States refuse to accept the amendment, Congress, by a majority of two thirds of both houses, has the right and the power to maintain temporarily all the principles established by it, and to render it clearly to their advantage to acquiesce in these reasonable demands of the loyal people so emphatically proclaimed. One of the cardinal ideas of the amendment is to protect the country against the speedy return of rebels to political power and to secure the national credit and the rights of citizens against rebel machinations. There can be no mistake that so much is demanded by the loyal sentiment of the country. But Greeley, standing at the head of a great newspaper and wielding large personal influence, in this hour of victory abandons every guarantee and favors universal amnesty.

The Syracuse Standard says:

If there existed no other cause for opposition to Greeley, his recent manifesto of Universal Amnesty and Impartial Suffrage has abundantly furnished it. The clearest minds in the country see that this plan, born of Greeley's brains, is the most delusive of will-o-the wisps. The union of the two propositions is illogical and unstatesmanlike. While universal amnesty would admit to the governing power the most virulent of rebels, impartial suffrage would manifestly fail to correct any of the evils thus precipitated upon the country. Impartial suffrage, either on a basis of property or education, would still leave the rebel element largely predominant and would insure nothing of justice to the country or the recently servile class. The plan is one of the Greeley crochets which have so often astonished the public, but which have vanished at the touch of reason. Greeley has signally exemplified his statesmanship by saying if he cannot obtain impartial suffrage he is willing to concede universal amnesty, which is in effect saying that he is ready to abandon all the fruits of the war and pay a premium to rebellion. Since the issuing of his manifesto, Greeley's chances for the Senatorship have visibly diminished, for it is the earnest conviction of the mass of the Union party that for the present it should stand by the constitutional amendment, as it is in honor pledged thereto, and not seek new methods of adjustment until the practicability of this one is either demonstrated or denied.

Paris Fashions.

The Queen, an English fashion magazine, says that in Paris very tasteful white bodices are now made to be worn under low dresses which have no sleeves to them. The material used is either plain Organdy or Swiss muslin, and they are cut open somewhat at the throat, the opening and the top of the bodice being ornamented with simple ruche. The sleeves are very wide, a la Juive, and are trimmed round with a deep box pleating of muslin. The low bodices worn over these high muslin ones are not cut higher than the middle of the chest, and they describe a slight curve at the top, the greatest elevation being in the center. They are trimmed with braces made of white ribbon of a contrasting color from the dress; thus, white ribbon braces would be worn with a pale blue dress, and pink or blue ribbon braces with a pearl gray skirt. The band, which is much wider than the one styled empire, is made of similar ribbon to the braces, and the two sash ends hang at the back of the skirt. Walking dresses made of woolen materials are very fashionable this winter. Cashmere and ribbed poplin of very peculiar manufacture, called drap de Venise, are the favored fabrics. Both materials are trimmed with narrow bands of American fur, or else with broad worsted gimp. Napoleon violet and sailor blue are the fashionable colors. Such dresses are made very simply. For example, a blue drap de Venise dress would have a close fitting bodice, and sleeves so narrow that the white cuffs must be tacked inside them; the skirt cut in vandykes and edged with white worsted gimp, headed with a round braid which forms arabesques above every vandyke. The petticoat has wide gimp in a straight row around it, and a row of tubular braid each side of the gimp. The peblum is lined with silk and ornamented to correspond with the skirt. This forms altogether a very ladylike costume for the Winter season, but by no means a cheap one, for forty dollars in specie is the price demanded by the Parisian dressmakers for what, after all, is but a simple walking dress.

An Important Franchise.—The late Legislature granted a franchise to Mr. I. W. Knight, one of the Representatives of Boise county, which was approved by the Governor, of a very important character. It was to grant to him for fifteen years the right to build bridges and collect tolls for the same over the two forks of Owyhee river, on a newly discovered route between Owyhee and Hunter's Station, on the Hill Beachey stage road. By this route a clear saving of ninety miles circuitous travel is made between Silver City and Hunter's Station, and the journey can therefore be made in one day less time to and from California. The new route is through a better country in every way than the one now traveled, and as soon as Mr. Knight builds his bridges over the Forks of the Owyhee, about a mile and a half apart, the stages and all the travel are very sure to take that route. The new road leaves the old at Hall's Ranch, makes a direct course across the country, southerly to the Forks of the Owyhee, and intersects the old road at Antelope Springs. A sketch of the lines traced by the old and new routes has been shown us by Mr. Knight, and a glance will at once suffice to show the great advantage in point of distance in the latter. It is readily described by tracing the rim of a circle, to represent the old route, and then by a straight diametrical shoot across it, to represent the new route. We are glad that so worthy a gentleman has obtained so valuable a franchise.—Idaho World.

More History.

As we have been drawn into a controversy respecting Jefferson, Burr, and others of their time, we may as well, in the view of the dearth of news and the absence of other topics of discourse, continue the subject

The Herald reproaches the Federalists of 1800 for supporting Burr for the Presidency instead of Jefferson. We intend to show that they then had no reason to think Burr the "bold, bad man," which the Herald in the light of subsequent events, calls him, and that they therefore were justified in supporting him. These points we shall establish by the use of an eminent Democratic authority,—even the authority of Jefferson himself.

Until Burr, by an unforseen contingency became the competitor of Jefferson for the Presidency, he was held in high estimation by Jefferson and his party. So long as Jefferson supposed he could use him to further his own ambitious designs, he and Burr were close political friends, but the moment they became rival candidates for the Presidency, Jefferson discovered that Burr was a bad, dangerous man. Jefferson and Burr were respectively the Democratic candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency in 1800, but being tied, and each having a greater number of votes than the Federal candidates, they became, as we have already shown, rival candidates for the first office. Until then, Burr was esteemed worthy of the highest confidence by his Democratic associates, but coming, through necessity, into opposition with Jefferson, he underwent an immediate and total transformation of character in the estimation of his former party friends, and became at once a "bold, bad man"

While Jefferson, by a systematic course of intrigue, duplicity, slander and falsehood, was endeavoring to undermine Adams' Administration and prepare the way for his own elevation, using Burr as one of his instruments to accomplish his designs, he wrote the latter a letter, dated June 17th, 1797, (Jefferson's Works, Vol III. p. 350) in which the following adulatory passage occurs: "Dear Sir: The newspapers give so minutely what is passing in Congress, that nothing in detail can be wanting for your information. Perhaps, however, some general view of our situation and prospects, since you left us, may not be unacceptable. At any rate, it will give me an opportunity of recalling myself to your memory and of evidencing my esteem for you." This estimable friend then treated to a dish of abuse of the party opposed to their common scheme of ambition, and the writer concludes, "I am, with great and sincere esteem, my dear sir, your friend and servant."

When the votes of the electoral college were first counted (in the election of 1800), Jefferson supposed that he had been chosen President and Burr Vice President. Accordingly on the 15th of December of that year he wrote to Burr, pouring forth his congratulations and compliments to the "bold, bad man" in this wise; Vol. III, p. 445): While I must congratulate you, my dear sir, on the issue of this contest, * * yet for myself, and for the substantial service of the public, I feel most sensibly the loss we sustain of your aid in our new Administration. It leaves a chasm in my arrangements which cannot be adequately filled up. I had endeavored to compose an Administration whose talents, integrity, names and dispositions should at once inspire unbounded public confidence. I lose you from the list, and am not sure of all the others." Such was the esteem, such were the sentiments with which Burr was regarded by Jefferson himself. And yet the Herald, an organ of the Jeffersonian Democracy, upbraids the Federalists for voting for a man for President, who, only eight weeks before the election, had received the highest encomiums from the founder of its party!

It will serve to show the insincerity and falsehood which were habitual with Jefferson, to consider his subsequent course in relation to Burr. After the name of Burr had begun to grow odious to all parties, Jefferson, ever on the alert to strengthen his own popularity, was not ashamed to write as follows of his "esteemed friend." Under date of January 26th, 1804, (Vol. IV, p. 520) he says. "I had never seen Col. Burr till he came as a member of the Senate (in 1791). His conduct soon inspired me with distrust. I habitually cautioned Mr. Madison against trusting him too much. I saw afterwards that under Gen. Washington's and Mr. Adams' Administrations, whenever a great military appointment or a diplomatic one was to be made, he came post to Philadelphia to show himself, and in fact, that he was always at market if they wanted him. With these impressions of Col. Burr, there had never been any intimacy between us, and but little association."

Thus it appears that the man whose conduct inspired Jefferson "with distrust" as early as 1791, was held in high estimation by him in 1797, that the man against whom he "habitually cautioned" Mr. Madison during Washington's Administration, and whom he knew to be "always in market," was wanted for a place in his own Cabinet in 1801; that the man whose friendship he disowned in 1804, and with whom he declared he had never been on terms of intimacy, was addressed by him in 1800 as one of his best friends and ablest and most trusted supporters, the loss of whose aid in his new Administration he "most sensibly felt," and whose election to the Vice Presidency had left a "chasm in his arrangements which could not be adequately filled!" This dirty prevarication of which he is convicted by his own writings, fully illustrates the character of Thomas Jefferson. His course in regard to Burr is but a specimen of his general conduct. It may be possible that Burr with all his infamy, was a more truthful man than Jefferson, for he certainly could not have been a falser one.

We have thus proved by the highest Democratic authority, that in 1800 Burr was not "known to be a bold, bad man," and that as his position in the Democratic party was second only to that of Jefferson, the Federalists were fully justified in voting for him. It is true that we have proven this by Mr. Jefferson himself, who, as we have also shown, is not a truthful witness, since he contradicts his own story and is guilty of direct falsehood, but as he is a Democratic witness, that party is estopped from denying the credibility of his testimony.

If we feel called on to pursue this subject, we shall take occasion to show how Jefferson intrigued against Washington, how he disseminated misrepresentations of Washington's public character, how he excited distrust of Washington's intentions, and how at the same time he made the most hypocritical professions of fidelity to the great man he was traducing.

The "Conservatives" and Democrats have taken to abusing Henry Ward Beecher again for his political preaching, charging him with violating the fourth commandment by preaching politics on Sunday. His preaching does not suit them so well as it did. They liked his political preaching when it had the leaven of "Conservatism," but since it has become Radical they cannot tolerate it.

Some of the Eastern papers have proposed the name of General John W. Geary, Governor of Pennsylvania, as candidate for Vice President of the United States

A statement is made respecting Secretary Stanton that he has not sought and does not want a foreign mission.

John Bull Comes to Judgment.

It would seem that we have enough of croakers at home to satisfy any reasonable demand. The Copperhead press is constantly filled with the most frightful predictions of the calamities which are to ensue, if Congress, in the exercise of its Constitutional right, should impeach the President. They declare that the President must resist, and will resist, with all the force at his command, the attempt of Congress to unseat him. What this force will consist of does not appear, but it will probably be something less than the army of Robinson Crusoe, who had one soldier, while Johnson, if this contingency should arrive will have none. But the Copperheads, notwithstanding the slim chance for a fight, are mournfully singing the woes of the next war. There is no intermission to their doleful rhapsodies. Every Copperhead editor claims to have the gift of prophecy, and as they are not sparing of its use, everybody's ears are assailed with these direful vaticinations.

And as if we had not enough of this at home to supply the demand, now comes John Bull, "grating the same lean and flashy song on his scrannel pipe of wretched straw." Hear the Colonist of Victoria

Politics in the United States continue to wear a most threatening and alarming aspect, and it requires no soothsayer to predict that, should the President be pushed to the wall by his enemies, he will use the military and naval forces at his command to punish them as they deserve. The position in which Mr. Johnson stands is one that commands the sympathy of all unprejudiced persons. At the risk of losing his popularity, he has opposed the efforts of the Radical Congress to denationalize their Southern fellow-citizens, and endow uneducated blacks with the privilege of citizenship.

This is about as good as some of the Copperhead ribaldry we have at home. "The position in which Mr. Johnson stands is one that commands the sympathy of all unprejudiced persons,"—particularly of our amiable British cousins who, from the beginning to the close of the late rebellion in the United States, aided the insurgents by every means in their power, who gleefully declared that the bubble of Republican Government had burst, and that the fate of Mexico awaited us, who, in their own ports, fitted out pirates to destroy our commerce, who gave shelter and afforded an asylum in their territory to thieves and murderers who made incursions upon us to destroy the lives of our citizens, burn our cities, rob our banks and plunder our country generally, who harbored the assassins of our Chief Magistrate, and who have resolutely refused to give up to justice any of the criminals for whom they feel so great a sympathy and admiration, who desired the permanent disruption of the American Union above all things else, and who labored incessantly for years to produce this result,—of this people Mr. Johnson does undoubtedly command the entire sympathy, just as Jefferson Davis and the Southern Confederacy commanded the same in former times. Mr. Johnson is welcome to all the aid this sympathy can afford him. But, Colonist, permit us to remark that you do not talk like one who is "unprejudiced." Your remarks discover a slight color of prejudice, we are certain. Just before that article was written you had been consulting some of your exchanges, yclept among us, Copperhead, and therefore your vision was slightly distorted. Better attend to your Fenians, and leave our affairs alone. For several years we have managed them after our own way in spite of the advice of our amiable, but pragmatic neighbors, and we think we may be safely trusted with our own business still. Better employ your ambitious finger in drawing plums from your own pudding, than in meddling with other people's pie.

A new plan has been proposed for supplying London with water. It is no less than constructing an acqueduct from Marten More, on the borders of Wales, to the high grounds about ten miles north of London, a distance of one hundred and eighty three miles. The calculation is that water can be obtained by this method sufficient to supply seven millions of people, or four millions more than the present number of inhabitants.

A new club has been formed in New York, called the Tribune Club. It has at present about forty members, many of them known to fame and their monthly dinners are said to be very pleasant gatherings. Horace Greeley, George William Curtis, Bayard Taylor, Theodore Tilton, Edmund C. Stedman and Alice and Phœbe Cary, are members.

When Mr. Johnson came to the Presidency he found the editor of the Radical organ Postmaster at Cleveland, Ohio. He held on to him for a while. Then he turned him out, and put in the editor of the Conservative organ. Next, he turned him out and put in the editor of the Copperhead organ. This is an apt illustration of the Rogue's March.

Judge Wyche is very generally spoken of as Republican candidate for Delegate to Congress from Washington Territory.

STATE ITEMS.

The Capitol Hotel at Salem has been purchased by Hon B Mallory

The name of the person recently drowned in the Willamette near Salem, was Thomas Dawsey, instead of John Dawson, as was formerly reported.

Judge Skinner will hold a special term of court at Roseburg, to commence on the 28th ult., for the purpose of trying the guilty parties connected with the row near that place.

The Directors of the Santiam Union Gold and Silver Mining Company have lately received advices from the East which induce the belief that there is a prospect of effecting an advantageous sale of the Company's mine

By a telegram dated Oakland, 19th inst, says the Eugene Journal, we received the sad intelligence of the death of Allen Luckey. It appears that he was standing near a fence examining a gun, when a rail falling, struck the hammer and the gun went off. He has many relatives and friends here who will mourn his untimely end

The editor of the Albany Democrat thus compliments a brother Democratic editor. "Seriously, the editor of the Courier (of Lafayette) is an illiterate, self conceited, over grown, maudlin nincompoop. Such men are a disgrace to journalism and a drawback to any party." Go to, Democrat, thou jokest. Hadst thou simply called thy brother an ass, the appellation would have been sufficiently descriptive without such a redundancy of words

A letter from Roseburg, Jan 12th says "Sol Culver, one of the rioters who was stabbed, and thought to be dangerously wounded and unable to be brought in for trial and who had medical attendance, and a Deputy Sheriff detailed expressly to watch him, made his escape last Friday night and has not yet been heard from." The writer thinks there is a "screw loose somewhere, or the officers were 'badly sold out.'" Four of the wounded have died, and some of the rest are hopeless

The population of Dalles City consists of two thousand residents who may be set down as permanent. The following shows a careful list of stores and shops. Four wholesale stores, six clothing and dry goods, ten groceries three bakeries, three drug, two jewelry, one stove and tin ware one book, one furniture, one crockery, one variety two saddler, one picture gallery three barber, four blacksmith and wagon, one lumber factory, one paint shop, one grist mill and with any amount of refreshment and billiard saloons. Main street wears the appearance of a healthy business street

MAIL MATTERS.—We were glad to see at Boise City, early in the week, a numerously signed petition, backed by the most substantial and prominent citizens, praying that a daily mail be granted over what is known as the Humboldt route, owned by Hill Beachy, Greathouse, Haley and Kelly, from Boise City to Hunter's Station. The stage route connects at the latter place with the Pioneer stages and continues thence to San Francisco, by railroad from Chico, and steamers from Sacramento. A weekly mail has been ordered over this route while a daily mail has been given over the Chico route. As between the two routes the service by way of the Humboldt is that which would best subserve the purposes of the people of this Territory, by all odds. The time can be made in from one to two days quicker in the most favorable traveling season of the year and in from five to eight days less time in the winter season. Indeed, it is, of the two routes, the only one over which the service can be regularly and surely performed during the winter. For these reasons we hope to hear in good time that if a daily mail can be given only to one of them, that it has been accorded to the Humboldt route, and we are very sure our delegate, Hon E D Holbrook, will use his best endeavors to have this change made. The wants and interests of this whole section require the daily mail service over the Humboldt route.—Idaho World, Jan. 12th.

EASTERN NEWS.

By the Steamer Pacific.

DATES TO JANUARY 23.

Congressional

WASHINGTON Jan. 18.—Mr Sumner offered a resolution calling for the correspondence of Minister Motley relative to his reported resignation. Mr Buckalew objected and the Chair said that under the rules it would be required to consider the resolution.

To-day the bill to regulate the tenure of office was taken up. The question was upon Sumner's amendment as an additional section, providing that all officers of the Government except clerks of Departments whose salaries exceed $1,000 per annum shall be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Mr Sumner said: It is now a little more than a year ago since I felt it my duty to characterize the message of the President as whitewashing. That message reported the condition of things in the rebel States as fair and promising, while the prevailing evidence was otherwise, and I do not forget how certain Senators [illegible] at this plainness, [illegible] of respect to the President. Yesterday some of these same Senators [illegible] struck [illegible] again to the same task. Time has shown I was right on the former occasion, and if there is anybody that doubts that I was also right yesterday I can only commend him to time and he will not have to wait long. For myself I shall insist always on a free exercise of debate and shall exercise it, thank God, now that the slave masters have been driven from this chamber. Such at least is the liberty of an American Senator. Of course there can be no citizen of the republic too high for exposure, as there can be none too low for protection. The exposure of the high and the protection of the weak—these are not only invaluable privileges but sacred duties. At last the country is turning its eyes to the actual condition of things. Already it sees that Andrew Johnson, who came to supreme power by a bloody accident, has become the successor of Jeff Davis in the spirit by which he is governed and the misery which he has inflicted on his country. It sees the President of the rebellion released by the President of the United States. It sees that the violence which took the life of his illustrious predecessor, is now by his perverse complicity extending through the rebel States, making all who love the Union its victims, and filling the land with oppression. It sees the war upon faithful Unionists still continued under his powerful auspices, without distinction of color, so both white and black are sacrificed. It sees that he is a monster of discord, not a minister of peace. It sees that so long as his opinion prevails there is small security for tranquility or reconciliation; that the restoration of prosperity in the rebel States so much longed for, must be delayed, and that the business of the whole country must be embarrassed and that those conditions upon which rests a sound currency must be postponed. All these things the country now sees, but indignation assumes the form of judgment when it is seen that this far reaching mischief, second only to the rebellion itself, of which it is a continuation, is invigorated and extended through a plain usurpation. Sir, in holding up Andrew Johnson to judgment, I do not allude to his exposure of himself in the state of bestial intoxication, while he was taking his oath of office, nor do I allude to the maudlin speech by which he has disgraced the country as it was never before disgraced, nor do I hearken to any reports of pardon sales or corruption."

WASHINGTON, Jan 19.—In the Senate, Mr Williams, of Oregon introduced a bill to grant additional land to aid in the construction of a railroad from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, which was referred

The Senate debated the Bankrupt bill and adjourned

The House ordered the Senate bill relating to the tenure of office to be printed

The Military Committee were directed to inquire into the expediency of paying a bounty to the California troops who enlisted for three years, but were discharged by the termination of the war

The House then proceeded to the consideration of Stevens' Reconstruction bill

Mr Spaulding offered an amendment suspending until the rebellious States are admitted to representation in Congress the writ of habeas corpus and putting them under martial law

Mr Stevens accepted the amendment

Several speeches were made, when the House adjourned

WASHINGTON, January 21.—In the Senate, Mr Nesmith stated that the report on Indian affairs was not complete and would be made to Congress instead of the Secretary when complete.

Mr Henderson introduced a bill to aid the Kansas and Washoe railroad, connecting the States on the Gulf of Mexico with the Pacific. It provides for guaranteeing the bonds of the Company

Mr Stewart, for the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill to aid the San Francisco Central Railroad, with an amendment, substituting a bill for grants of land in California in aid of the construction of certain roads in the State. All the above were referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad

The tariff bill was under consideration. OREGON CITY ITEMS.—The Enterprise furnishes the following items: The term of the City Seminary and Grade School which closed last evening, was one of very gratifying results. The following statement of the attendance during the term shows an increase over any previous term. There being no vacation till summer, studies will be resumed on Monday morning as usual. Following is the report: Primary department Miss Lambrant teacher—Total number of boys on roll 34 girls, [illegible] average attendance 45. Intermediate Department, N W Rasdal, teacher—Total number boys on roll, 30 girls, 41, average attendance 64. Higher Department D Pope B A, teacher—Total number boys on roll 36 girls, 31 average attendance, 43. Aggregate on rolls for the term [illegible], average in departments for the term 152. On Monday last we spent a short hour in looking through the works of the Oregon City Paper Company on Second street. We can say nothing in addition to what we have already written concerning a description of the works except that the mill is in successful operation under the management of Superintendent Carroll and assistant Clifton, and its production is of a better quality than any we have heretofore seen in our market. The mill will be able to make about 1,500 reams of straw wrapping paper per month at $1 90 per ream against $2 75 and $3 00 per ream as for months previous. The manufacture of paper in this State is one of the important accomplishments of effort put forth the past year by men who have an interest in making us independent of foreign aid. Stock, which was thought to be scarce proves to be abundant, and hence will be easily and cheaply obtained, while the facilities for manufacturing are unequalled. The purity of the Willamette for cleansing purposes is already established. ...The late action of the commissioners in appropriating a small sum of money to aid in repairing the road from Oregon City to Aurora had some good effect. We are informed that Mr Fish who had the appropriation to disburse, has made some temporary improvements and the road is in more than ordinary good condition. On Tuesday Felix Collins was required to appear before Justice Moore on a charge of petit larceny, and as he was proven guilty, and not having the wherewith to liquidate, was sent up for the space of twelve days.

VANCOUVER ITEMS.—From the Vancouver Register of the 26th, we gather the following: A meeting of the patrons of the public school was held on the evening of the 23d, and preliminary steps taken to have the school house finished and to add a Primary Department. Measures have been inaugurated for the erection of a woolen factory on Salmon creek, about five miles from Vancouver. ...G R Washburn and Joseph Brant, Jr, a couple of "precocious youths" employed in the Register office, have issued two numbers of the New Press, a diminutive weekly sheet, devoted to fun principally, as we judge from the extracts published in the Register. The tender youths promise however, that "the paper will always be of a high moral tone, and that if they get plenty of paying subscribers the tone will get higher and higher-er." ...Five of the prisoners who lately escaped from the garrison have been recaptured. Two of them and about $200, worth of goods taken from Mr Kaiser's store have not been recovered... A new fire engine is expected on the next steamer and provision has been made for an engine house.—Several runaways occurred during the last week, without, however, any serious consequences, beyond the damage to team and sleighs. The [illegible] charged with keeping diseased sheep on the Fourth Plain were tried last week by a jury and acquitted.

RECORDER'S COURT.—Andrew Anderson and John Brown were before the Recorder Saturday morning, charged with disorderly conduct and fighting on First street. They were each fined $10 and costs and in default of payment were sent to jail for three days. The arrest of these parties by officer Ball about one o'clock Saturday morning was attended with a somewhat ludicrous incident, exhibiting unusual honesty or unusual stupidity on the part of Anderson. The two men had a bit of a fight to begin with, when officer Ball arrested them and started them toward the jail. Despite his best efforts, they had a bout or two on the way and after their arrival at the jail door. Mr. Ball had got them separated finally, and was about to open the door, holding on to Anderson, when the other man broke and run. Ball had got his grit up, and concluding that if he couldn't cage but one that one should be Brown, so he gave chase and overhauled him some [illegible] down the street. When he arrived again at the jail, he found Anderson standing exactly where he had left him, waiting to be admitted. Ball was too much astonished to make any objection, so Anderson went in. More glycerine libations were at the bottom of the row.

THE FIDELITER.—On the 19th inst. the Fideliter put back to Victoria having been in Neah Bay for eight days, on account of rough weather. The Victoria papers, upon her return, announced that, during her attempted trip out the Straits, she shipped water twice so that her fires were extinguished. Capt Erskine says her fires were not extinguished, and that he only put her about because he knew from the heavy sea on, and the quarter from which the wind was blowing, that it would be impossible to enter the Columbia river for several days, during which time he would be obliged to lie off the bar to the great discomfort of his passengers. The Fideliter is as trustworthy in a heavy sea as any of the steamers plying on our coast trade, and no vessel has a more careful or considerate commander than Captain Erskine. The attempt of the Victoria papers to excite distrust of the Fideliter's seaworthiness will probably fail of its intended effect.

"DISCONTENTED" VICTORIANS.—It seems that, notwithstanding the efforts of the Victoria press to induce "discontented Victorians" to remain on the Queen's Islands, they occasionally will strive to get away. The Colonist of the 21st says: "On board the Fideliter, when she left this port, were three debtors, who had taken French leave of their creditors. The unexpected return of the steamer in this port delivered the three delinquents into the hands of the Phillistines. One 'gemman' shipped all his goods aboard the steamer, proposing to go into business in Portland." We are rather pleased that the Frenchleave-taking style of "gemmen" are to remain among the "Phillistines." We do not want that sort here. But your upright straight-forward business men who are dropping anchor in our city, are welcome. We are as glad to have them come as they are to get here.

"A ROW AMONG CHINAMEN.—During Saturday evening a row occurred among some Chinamen on Morrison street, in which one of them got a severe cut on the head. After a chase, this man was arrested by Marshal Hoyt and officer Town, and subsequently the man who inflicted the wound was caught. He represents that the wounded Chinaman drew a pistol on him, when he cut him in self-defence. No explanation of the row could be obtained from the Chinamen. One of them gave bail for his appearance this morning and the other is in jail.

THE KLAMATH EARTHQUAKE A HOAX.—A dispatch from Toll House, Siskiyou mountain, June 21, says: "Hugo Burse, sutler at Fort Klamath, who left that post January 9th, the day after the reported earthquake, says the whole thing was made of whole cloth, that there is no such person as N L Tennison of the fort, and that he thinks some of the soldiers who felt themselves humbugged in not being mustered out, set it up to humbug the world."

ON THE WILLAMETTE.—The steamers Enterprise, Reliance, Fannie Patton, and Union are all in the basin at Oregon City. The Reliance will start for Salem this morning and the Union for Dayton. The Fannie Patton will go up Tuesday morning and the Enterprise on Wednesday morning. There will be a boat each day during the week except Saturday.

TUNING AND REPAIRING.—Mr H. Sinsheim, after an absence of a year or more, has returned to Portland, and announces that he will resume his avocation of tuning and repairing pianos organs, etc. He has the reputation of being an excellent tuner, and those wanting such work done will do well to call on him.

THE STEAMER.—The telegraph line was up last night, but it worked so very badly that no dispatches could be got through, the only item received being that the steamer left San Francisco for Portland on the 24th. The operator here could not learn what steamer started nor what time of the day she left.

SOUTH WIND.—A remarkably warm south wind sprung up last evening, accompanied by copious falls of mist, under the effects of which the snow disappeared more rapidly than it came. Capt Baughman of the Alert reported the snow all gone at Oregon City at noon yesterday.

SALMON.—Messrs Everding & Beebe receive by the Fideliter, 482 barrels of Frazer river salmon. Mr Everding informs us that should this and the San Francisco markets not take them, they will be sent to the Sandwich Islands where the demand is said to be good.

FOR THIS MORNING.—Phillip Shat is charged in the Recorder's court with keeping the Globe Hotel without a license and S. B Vance with an assault and battery upon Charles Prior. The charges will be examined this morning.

THE "CROSBY."—The schooner Crosby was anchored in Neah Bay when the Fideliter left there to return to Victoria on the 18th. On the arrival out again of the Fideliter on the 24th, the Crosby had left.

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrived per Alert, Saturday, Jan. 26th: 123 sks feed, 290 bxs apples 3 coops chickens, 1 bale woolen goods 18 bxs eggs 2 kgs cider, 8 sks dried apples and 2 hf bbls lard.

FROM THE LOWER COLUMBIA.—The Couch arrived Saturday evening from Astoria, reporting very heavy weather at the mouth of the river. A strong southeast gale was blowing.

PRICE OF GOLD.—The Alta California's financial and commercial report of the 23d quotes gold in New York at 135¾, sterling, 108¾. Legal Tenders at San Francisco, 73@73½.

THE GOVERNOR.—Gov Woods arrived here on Saturday and gave us a friendly call or two. He goes up Tuesday morning to Salem.

BOARD OF DELEGATES.—The Board of Delegates of the Fire Department will have a meeting on Tuesday evening the 29th.

TO SAIL.—The Fideliter will sail for Victoria at 6 o'clock P M Wednesday the 30th inst.

FLOUR.—Oregon extra flour in quarter sacks is quoted in San Francisco Jan 23d, at $4 75@4 85.

FALLING.—As we went to press last night the snow was still falling. So were the prices for clothing at the well known establishment of Harman Bros.

IN USE FIVE YEARS. And not a day out of order in that time. Mr Wm A West of Dry Run, Pa. says: "We have had one of the Willcox & Gibbs Sewing Machines in use for over five years and it has not been a day out of running order in that time. We would not exchange it with our neighbors for the Wheeler & Wilson or Grover & Baker though I have nothing to say disparagingly of them." Stewart & Gourley, Agents, Portland, Oregon.

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts

The undersigned who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price excites the cupidity of some manufacturers and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark seek to deceive the public palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless buyers should be forewarned and placed on their guard against this practice

Eli Goddard's Forfeit

The youthful portion of the town of Liberty Centre was in a high state of excitement one January day of February, for Kitty Baldwin had announced to them on lemon colored paper, with a bunch of hyacinths in the left hand upper corner, that the pleasure of their company was requested on the following Tuesday Now it was a long time since a party had been given in Liberty Centre, for the reason that Judge Dyke's daughter had given the last one, and it had been done in such a style of magnificence that no one could surpass it, so they would give none at all But Kitty Baldwin had been spending two weeks at her cousin's in Boston and obtained some new ideas of which she was sure Amanda Dyke had never dreamed of, so she determined, on her return, to have a party several notches above the Dykes She suggested this to her father and he readily acquiesced, for he had just made a speech in the legislature on the "Barbarism of smoking," and he wanted to know the opinions of the neighbors So Kitty went to work at once, and made a list of those she wished to invite First she put down those who were classed as the "upper ten" of Liberty Centre but on second thought, she found that if she wished to amaze any one with the splendor of her entertainment, she had better include in her invitations every one that she knew On counting them up, she found that they numbered seventy If they all came, the rooms would be crowded, but she concluded that some would be sick, or have nothing to wear, or be otherwise engaged. The notes were, therefore, dispatched, and, as already stated, the announcement was electrifying to the town "Are you invited?" and, "What shall you wear?" were the only questions asked and answered Straight hair was kept in curl papers night and day, in order that it should be sure to curl on the important night Summer bonnets were robbed of their floral ornaments to furnish wreaths, kid gloves were rubbed clean with camphine, bright red locks were modified to "auburn" by the assiduous application of divers kinds of hair grease, breastpins were repaired, and everything done to make it as dazzling as possible The busiest scene was at Squire Baldwin's. Carpets were covered with sheeting, new red damask curtains were purchased to replace the old ones; astral and solar lamps were brought from secluded closets, spoons, blanc mange molds and candelabra were borrowed from the neighbors superfluous furniture was carried up stairs, and the whole house was swept and garnished.

Day and nights rolled on, and the long-wished for evening arrived. Squire Baldwin lighted up the white and blue candles on the mantlepiece, the solars and astrals began to shed their radiance, Miss Kitty, in white muslin, trimmed with cherry-colored ribbon, sat cautiously on a chair awaiting the arrivals. Pretty soon the bell rang, and the door being opened, a confused mass of hoods and cloaks hurried up stairs. The bell rang again and again; sometimes a dozen would meet on the door-step, and sometimes a solitary bachelor would come in. By and by an alarming knock was given at the door, accompanied by a vigorous pull at the bell. This was Eli Goddard, and a word or two about him would not be amiss. He was a son of Parson Goddard, and one of the beaux of Liberty Center. He was a noble, generous nature, but was the most awkward fellow imaginable. He was always stumbling and blundering, and his hands were like the hands on the clock on the Fitchburg Railroad depot in Boston, never in the right place. The girls all laughed at him, and none of them more than Carrie Brooks —a wild, brilliant, fun-loving girl who had a keen sense of the ludicrous, which sometimes overcame the better feelings of her heart.

Eli Goddard admired Carrie, and tried to manifest it; but he did not know how, and made himself ridiculous by his funny attempts. Carrie had many other suitors, and although they were jealous of each other, not one of them was jealous of Eli. They thought so lively a girl as Carrie would not regard such an unsophisticated youth, so long as they were about with their stylish clothes, massive finger-rings and scarf pins. In reality, Carrie cared nothing for outward show, and in thinking over the character and habits of the young men of her acquaintance, she had often decided in her own mind, that Eli Goddard was the most sensible, upright and virtuous of all. He was never seen in idle or dissolute company; never played billiards in the tavern, was always posted on all subjects of history and philosophy, and stood at the head of the academy as a scholar. She lamented his gawky ways, and sometimes wondered if something could not be done to remedy them, and she would determine not to laugh at him again, but the next time she witnessed one of his mistakes, her merry laugh would burst forth.

As we were saying, Eli appeared. He had knocked on the knocker, and then, having espied the bell handle, he grasped it and gave it a jerk The wire worked very easy, and Eli came very near going backward over the steps. This seemed to disturb his equilibrium the whole evening He tumbled twice in going up stairs, and when he came down to the parlor, he bowed first to the servant girl who was going out, having brought in a lamp.

At length the company being all assembled, it was suggested that games be played, and "Juniper tree" was decided upon, and a merry time they had of it for half an hour. Then the game of "Copenhagen" was substituted, during which gathers were ripped out, hoops dislocated, hair came down, blushes came up, and there was a good time generally. Carrie Brooks received the most kisses, and Augustus Hobbs seemed to be the most active in disbursing them. Eli Goddard succeeded in slapping Anna Breck's hand; and in chasing her for his reward, he tipped over the piano stool, pulled down the window curtain, and after a laughable struggle, had to content himself with kissing the back of her head

Then came "Blind Man's Buff," and Jared Wilcox was the first one blinded He stood for a moment in the middle of the room, and then made a sudden start to the right, followed by another to the left, but they eluded his grasp. He jumped around the room like a colt, the girls crowded into corners, jumped upon sideboards, window sills and book-cases, contriving all manner of ways to escape capture. Just at this moment Mrs. Curtiss, who lived over the way, came from the old folks' room to the parlor door, to see what she called the "carrying on." She was a neighborly old lady, and always liked to be around on great occasions. A cancer had destroyed her nose many years before and she wore a false one, made of silver, and covered with flesh-colored kid. Her spectacles were fastened to it in such a manner that it was difficult to detect the deception, and many who had known her for a long while were not aware of the real value of her nose At night when she retired, nose and spectacles came off together and were resumed in the morning.

Jared happened to make a dive in that direction, and grasped the old lady around the waist Before she could recover herself from the astonishment, Jared passed his hand over her face to ascertain whom he had caught, and in doing so, knocked off the spectacles, nose and all. A loud roar burst from the company. Wilcox pulled the bandage from his eyes, and on beholding what he had done, he rolled back on the carpet in convulsive laughter. Mrs. Curtiss picked up her property, and, without stopping to say "good bye," flounced out of the house, and hurried to her own domicile. It may be well here to state that she never visited the Baldwin's again, and no overtures from them could pacify her. She never forgot it.

Another game was started, succeeded by some playing on the piano and singing, until some one proposed playing forfeits, and the motion was accepted. Eli heard this with dismay, he had some experience in playing forfeits, and had found that redeeming them before a whole room full of folks was a difficult operation. However, he had to do as the rest did, and "Twirl the Platter" was the chosen game They each had a number

Eli's number was nine, and that number was called more frequently than any other, but Eli was as spry as a cat, and always caught the platter before it was done spinning. A large quantity of handkerchiefs, rings and penknives were accumulated as pawns, but none of them belonged to Eli. At last Carrie Brooks' turn came to twirl it, she gave the dish a gentle twist, and called out "nine" Eli started, but the plate was motionless when he reached it, and he was called upon for a forfeit. He offered his large silk bandanna, and the game went on At length came the redeeming of the forfeits Seth Pike was elected judge and after being blindfolded so that he could not know to whom the forfeits belonged, he took a seat Albert Carter held up a plain gold ring, and said:

"This is a lady's pawn, and what shall she do to redeem it?"

"She shall measure off four yards of love ribbon with Hiram Flagg, and cut it off every half yard," said the judge

Hiram immediately stepped forward wiping his mouth with a bright yellow handkerchief, as if it was watering in anticipation of a delightful treat The ring belonged to Almira Shumway, a smart little girl, who advanced quite briskly to redeem her property They both appeared to understand how to measure love ribbon, and it was rumored that an extra yard was cut off, but, of course, it was a mistake in counting

"This is a gentlemen's forfeit, and what shall he do to redeem it?" said Albert Carter, holding up a pearl handle knife.

"He shall go to Rome," solemnly pronounced the judge.

Going to Rome means kissing every girl in the room The knife was Jared Wilcox's so he arose, looked carefully around as if to see which was the best end of the room to commence on, and choosing the Carrie Brooks side, he "went in." The first two or three he got pretty well, the next one was harder, and by the time he got through, his hair was ruffled and his shirt unruffled, his dicky broken down, and the bow of his neck tie under his left ear, and huge drops of perspiration stood upon his forehead He had done his work nobly, and kissed every girl in the room.

The next forfeit was Joe Budd's, to redeem which he was ordered to stand out in the room and repeat a verse of poetry Now, Joe was not a man of letters although he was clerk in the post office, and he knew nothing about poetry He hesitated and went forward, and after scratching his head a moment, delivered the following

> "The Pilgrim fathers where are they?
> In silence and in fear!
> They still rolled in the bay as they rolled that day
> With their hymns of lofty cheer"

In early childhood, Budd had learned by heart the two poems by Mrs Hemans on the "Pilgrim Fathers" but in his confusion got the two mixed together

A loud burst of mirth from the assembly caused the discomfited Budd to retreat to his seat The idea of the pilgrims still rolling in Massachusetts Bay was sufficient to keep the company merry for some time Then Susy Clark had to "make a plough" with George Dewey, and Mark Adams was bidden to read one of Artemus Ward's letters aloud without laughing which of course he couldn't do, so the judge excused him after a few attempts

All this time Eli sat in fear and trembling, his red bandanna remained untouched, and he hoped that something would occur to disturb the game before the forfeit was proclaimed At length all were disposed of but his. Carter held it up and said

"This is the last forfeit—a gentleman's, what shall he do to redeem it?"

"Now, Seth Pike, the judge, had been wondering where Eli Goddard's handkerchief was, so when he heard that this was the last forfeit, he felt sure it was Eli's. He had reserved for him a task which he knew from experience was a hard one to perform, especially for any one disposed to diffidence, so he sentenced Eli to "bow to the wittiest, kneel to the prettiest, and kiss the one he loved best." Eli's heart beat violently How could he perform such a task before such a room full? How could he dare to kiss Carrie Brooks in a public assembly, when he had never been courageous enough to attempt such a thing in private, and he would kiss no one else, for that would not be acting the truth, and Eli was very strict on matters of truth. He did not know what to do! All eyes were turned toward him, and every one was calling for him to redeem his pledge He made an effort and stood up, wishing himself anywhere but there, when, to his delight, a servant announced that supper was ready Mrs. Baldwin requested the gentlemen to take partners for the supper room, and it was decided that Eli should redeem his forfeit afterward.

As usual on such occasions, all the pretty girls were secured by the experienced party goers, and the young timid gentlemen had to put up with what there was left. Fortunately Eli was quite near to Carrie, and to her he offered his arm On their way to the room he found that they were out of step, and in making a hop to get into step, he trod on Sarah Blake's dress, who was in front and ripped it nearly off the waist. While stopping to apologize, and find a pin to repair damage, the crowd passed on, and when Eli reached the room with her fair companion, they were obliged to station themselves on the outer edge of the circle, near the door.

The table presented a dazzling appearance. Pyramids of blanc mange, and monuments of ice-cream towered above ramparts of nice jelly and charlotte russe—sponge cake, stewed oysters, nuts, apples and oranges, were placed in admirable confusion. The gentlemen were expected to help their partners. Carrie said she would like some oysters, and some frozen pudding.

Poor Eli was completely nonplussed He had heard of oyster stews, and knew them by sight, but as for frozen pudding, he didn't know what in the world that could be, but he decided to do his best, so he elbowed his way to the table, and after some vain attempts he contrived to fill a saucer with oyster stew—and finding that it took all his skill to keep it from spilling, he thought it best to return with that, and then get the pudding, so he started for his partner. He was soon wedged in between a fat man and a pretty large sized lady; he waited a little for them to move, but they did not; he made a bold push, and would have got through nobly had not the exertion caused him to spill some of the hot oysters down the back of the fat lady's dress She screamed and startled Eli so that he jumped and knocked the arm of the fat gentleman just as he had his fork raised to his mouth, consequently, the fork was forced two-thirds its length down the gentleman's throat, taking away in its course a large portion of cuticle.

It is needless to record the exact words uttered on the occasion, but Eli stammered out an excuse and struck out in another direction At last he reached Miss Brooks and presented her with a saucer, when lo! there was only one oyster remaining in it, and no spoon, the rest had been lost during the perilous passage. We cannot describe Eli's dire confusion. Perhaps some estimate can be made of it when we say his complexion made the new red damask curtains look faded. He laid the plate on the corner of the mantel, and uttering some inarticulate sentences, he made his way to the table, determined upon securing the frozen pudding Seeing a fork he stuck it into several nondescript looking mixtures, but they were all too soft to be frozen.

When Kitty was purchasing her confectionery she happened to see in a window a very handsome circular loaf of cake, intensely ornamented with cupids and gilt, on inquiring its price, she was informed that it was composed of lignum-vitæ, and only used for a show Kitty thought it would look well in the center of the supper table, so she hired it for the purpose It was about as large as the crown of a hat, and weighed three or four pounds. Eli aimed his fork at this, and finding it impenetrable, concluded that it must be a frozen pudding, surely, so taking a knife he endeavored to procure a slice, but found that he could not get off a crumb. He then concluded that it was not very large, and if Miss Carrie did not eat the whole she could leave the rest, so he deposited it on a dish and set out on his return trip, and trip it proved to be, too, for when he got within ten feet of his destination, his foot caught in a lady's flounce and threw him forward a step or two; the impetus slid the lignum vitæ cake off the dish, and it landed plump on the foot of the same old gentleman whose throat received such violent treatment only a few moments before His exasperation was only exceeded by the laughter of the company, who, although they sympathized with both of the sufferers, could not control themselves at such a ludicrous scene. Eli rushed to the door, and hurrying to the parlor, seated himself on a sofa, and covering his face with his hands, bewailed his ill-luck, and wondering how it was that he should be so gawky and clumsy, while all his fellows went through so gracefully. What would Carrie think of him? How could he bear to meet her again, or how could he ever hope that she would love him? While he was asking himself these questions, he felt a gentle hand on his arm, and looking up he saw that Carrie stood beside him.

"Eli," said she, in her sweet and musical voice, "you must not feel so bad about your mishaps, every one is liable to them more or less, and as they are not errors of the heart, they are soon forgotten, and do not injure the character of the person. It is much better to commit a few awkward blunders than to carry, under a graceful exterior, a deceitful, hardened, or envious heart. For my part, I am really sorry you were so unlucky, and although I could not help laughing with the rest, at old Twiner's grimaces, when that cake fell on his gouty toe, I pitied you both, ever so much."

Eli was astonished at these words from Carrie Brooks, the very girl he loved so much, the belle of the party, and the one of all others that appeared not to care for him. The few simple words she had uttered had dispelled all the gloom which had discouraged him, and he felt as if, with her to pity him, he could encounter any quantity of laughter and derision

"Carrie," said he, "I thank you very much for your kindness, both in forgiving and pitying me for my misfortunes, but I am not through yet When I get back they will be sure to call upon me for my forfeit, and I cannot reveal the secrets of my heart before all the company—what can I do!"

"I'll tell you," said Carrie, "you can bow to, kneel to, and kiss the girl you sit nearest to, it will not take a minute, and then we are going to have a cotillion, and no one will think anything about it"

"I would willingly do that, Carrie, provided that you was the one that I should sit the nearest to."

It was now Carrie's turn to blush, and Eli could hardly believe his own voice but the words were uttered, and he wisely thought he had better go on and say the whole

"For the truth is, Carrie," said he "I do love you the best, and have for a long time, but I thought you did not care anything for me while so many fashionable young men are so attentive to you Whenever I attempted to show my preference, I was sure to make some funny mistake which would cause much laughter, but Carrie, if you can assure me that I have not loved you in vain and that my hopes for the future may be blended with yours, then I will prove to you that your confidence in me is not misplaced and my constant care shall be to make myself worthy of you"

"I do assure you, Eli," replied Carrie, placing her hand in his, "that I feel proud of your love, and will give you in return all that my poor heart can afford"

Eli imprinted a kiss upon her mouth, and as if by magic, his feelings of awkwardness and embarrassment fell from him He was like another man, and felt as if he could make a speech in the town hall, kiss a room full of girls and carve a turkey without making a single mistake

A few more words passed between the lovers when laughing voices warned them that somebody was coming

"Well, Carrie," said Eli, "I shan't be afraid to redeem my forfeit now"

The parlor was now filled with guests returned from the supper table, and as order was restored Seth Pike reminded them that the last forfeit remained unredeemed and to redeem it, Eli Goddard was to "bow to the wittiest kneel to the prettiest and kiss the one he loved best"

Eli quickly arose and then remarked that such a task was very easy to perform, inasmuch as there was but one in the room on whom he could bestow all these homages, crossed to where Carrie sat, made a graceful bow, and then bending on one knee, raised her hand to his lips and kissed it He then returned to his seat as easily and safely as any dancing master could have done Every one was astonished but Carrie and Eli No one laughed, but several cried "good!" and "that was well done!"

Almira Shumway now seated herself at the piano, and commenced playing "Hail Columbia!" A cotillion was soon formed, and the evening terminated with a merry dance

When Augustus Hobbs and William Steel, and a few other young men asked the pleasure of escorting Miss Brooks home, they were surprised to hear that she was engaged, and their chagrin at seeing Eli Goddard in the coveted office was greatly increased the next day, when they learned what Carrie had told them was literally true—she was engaged

In a pleasant home in Liberty Center live Mr and Mrs Eli Goddard and family, and when the children are unusually good they are rewarded with an account of the funny scenes at Kitty Baldwin's party

Murder of a Child by its Mother

From the Wheeling Intelligencer of December 9th we learn the following particulars of a most horrible and desperate murder and attempted suicide which occurred at the Packer Hotel, in that city

A woman, who gives her name as Minnie Nugent, arrived there on Tuesday morning last on the Parkersburg boat, and took lodgings She had with her a little girl about three years old There was nothing especially unusual about her appearance, or that created the least suspicion as to the horrible mission on which she had come After she had been assigned to a room, very little was seen of her by the inmates of the house She ate her breakfast, and also her dinner, having the child with her at both meals She did not come down to supper, nor to breakfast the next morning. The landlady, noticing her absence, sent up to her room to see if anything was wrong, and the chambermaid returned saying that the woman was asleep. Dinner passed off, and still the woman did not come down Thinking such long fasting a very unusual occurrence, the landlady went up to the room a second time with her chambermaid, and, knocking at the door, the woman came and opened it The situation of affairs was soon made known She pointed these at the door to the little girl lying dead in the bed, and at once confessed that she had murdered it on the previous evening, since which time she had been under the influence of opium, taken with the expectation of killing herself Indeed, the evidence of all she said was conclusive enough. She had been vomiting, and was at the time in a state of delirium from the effects of the drug Her child was lying in its blood stained night clothes in the bed from which she had just arisen, with three mortal dagger stabs through its left breast and side

The sight was horrible enough, and was made doubly so by the situation of the woman Confused as she was with opium, she was able to tell the history of the circumstance She related that her maiden name was Arbor, that her parents lived at Williamstown, in Wood county, in West Virginia, opposite Marietta, that four years ago she married a man named Nugent, against their consent, running away with him, and that two months after the birth of the little girl he had deserted her and never returned, that her mother had refused to become reconciled to her, and had never forgiven her marriage, but had made her home so intolerable that she could not live there, and had poisoned the minds of all her other relatives against her to such an extent that she had no place on earth to call a home, and was forced to go out in the world and seek a subsistence She had gone out, and had found that there was no place for her, nothing that she could do, and she could not bear to beg her way from place to place. Rendered thus desperate by brooding over her hopeless prospects, and anxious not to leave her little daughter to a fate worse, perhaps, than death, she calmly resolved to end both their lives, and after making up her mind to this effect, came to Wheeling to carry out her resolve. She purchased a small dagger and also several papers of powdered opium, and seems to have made minute preparations for death, as the documents published seem to indicate. She said that for several hours after arriving she could not bear to kill her child, and yet she felt that she must do it She waited until it fell asleep, and then putting on its night clothes and placing it in bed, bent over it, and kissed it several times before planting the dagger in its heart, as she finally did. The child, she said, made no cry, only moaned, and, with scarcely a struggle bled to death She had stabbed it three times, twice in the left lung and once in the heart. She says that before she took its life she knelt down and prayed over it, and also repeated her prayer after she had inflicted the wounds, and that she had kissed away its last expiring breath.

After the perpetration of this horrible and unnatural deed, she took the opium with which she proposed to take her own life, and then lay down beside her dead child to die. For some cause, either from an overdose of the opium or else from an insufficient amount of it, she failed to accomplish her intentions of suicide She had vomited a great deal, and seemed to have thrown up most of the poison. Several powders, with directions in a female handwriting, were found among her effects, as were also a number of letters She is a young woman, aged only about twenty-one, rather illiterate, and evidently unbalanced in her mental and moral organization

5 A register shall be kept in the Paymaster General's office, and also in the office of the Second Auditor of all claims presented under the law, in which the claimants will be classified by regiments, etc. If the claims be allowed the amount of bounty paid to each will be noted, and if rejected the cause of rejection will be distinctly stated

6 In the applications for bounty, as required by the third of these rules, the affidavit shall state each and every period of service rendered by the claimant, and also that he never served otherwise than as herein stated

7 Organizations irregularly in the service of the United States, or called out for special purposes as State Militia, Home Guards, etc, and not included in the general bounty laws, are not included within the meaning of the Act.

8 Soldiers enlisted for "three years or during the war," who were discharged by reason of the termination of the war, shall be considered as having served out the period of their enlistment, and are entitled to bounty under this Act

9 The minority of heirs, claimants for bounty under this Act, must be proven to have existed at the date of its passage Parents shall receive jointly the bounty to which they may be entitled as heirs, unless the father has abandoned the support of his family, in which case it shall be paid to the mother Non residence in the United States shall not be a bar to the claim of heirs, who would otherwise legally inherit.

The provisions of the Act exclude from its benefits the following classes

1 Those who, after serving the full period of their enlistment, were dishonorably discharged at its expiration

2 Those discharged during enlistment by way of favor or punishment

3 Those discharged on account of disability contracted in the service but not occasioned by wounds received in the line of duty who shall not have previously served two or three years respectively at the time of discharge

4 Those discharged on account of disability existing at the time of their enlistment

5 The heirs of those who have died since their discharge of wounds or disease not contracted in the service and in the line of duty

6 The surviving soldiers and heirs of deceased soldiers who, under previous laws, have received or are entitled to receive a bounty of more than $100 from the United States

7 The surviving soldiers, as well as the heirs of deceased soldiers when such soldiers have bartered, sold, assigned loaned transferred, exchanged or given away their final discharge papers or any interest in the bounty provided by this or any other Act of Congress

8 The Act of the 28th of July 1866, creates no right of inheritance beyond those vested by the law under which these heirs received or were entitled to receive the original bounty, and debars certain classes, brothers and sisters of heirs that were entitled to receive the original bounty, from any claim for the additional bounty provided by this Act

OF BALTIMORE,

ARE ACKNOWLEDGED BY THE ENTIRE SAN Francisco Jobbing trade to be beyond comparison the best that came to this market That

THEIR EXCELLENCE IS NOT IMAGINARY,

Any one who has tried them will admit and the simple secret of their superiority, lies in the extreme care and little expense lavished upon their preparation Each Oyster is opened by hand with the knife with strict regard to the preservation of the Liquor by which means all the original flavor is retained Contrast this method with the one usually pursued of opening the Oysters in bulk by steaming by which means the entire Liquor is lost and a manufactured one substituted and the reason for the actual superiority of this brand is at once apparent

TO THE UNFORTUNATE.
NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES
Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

616 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure Dr G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure or make no charge

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co

Mustang Liniment.

OVER A MILLION DOLLARS SAVED!

Gentlemen—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment. It soon effected a permanent cure.
J. L. DOWNING.
Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men have used it for Burns, Bruises, Sores, Rheumatism, &c., and all say it acts like magic. J W HEWITT,
Foreman American, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Ex.

"The sprain of my daughter's ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.
Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865. ED SEELEY"

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing U. S. Stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone-plate label Look closely!
